87th Annual Meeting of the Pacific Sociological Association
Oakland, California
Wednesday, March 30 to Saturday, April 2, 2016
at the Marriott Downtown City Center/Oakland Convention Center

Linking Theory and Practice:
The Conduct of Sociology

President: Robert Nash Parker, UC Riverside
Vice President: Mary Virnoche, Humboldt State University
Dear PSA 2016 Annual Meeting Participants,

Welcome to Oakland and the 2016 Pacific Sociological Association 87th Annual Meeting. I think you will agree with me that the program this year is fantastic, and I know you will enjoy exploring the varieties of sociology represented here. I want to thank the Program Committee, the PSA committees, and the regular members of PSA who submitted sessions and ideas about the program. I also want to thank Lora Bristow, our fabulous Executive Director, whose hard work, dedication, and problem-solving abilities have made this year’s meeting possible and excellent. Check out the restaurant guide, and explore the diverse cuisines and culture of downtown Oakland, a place about which it is no longer possible to say “there is no there, there”, as Gertrude Stein once proclaimed. Enjoy!

Robert Nash Parker
President 2015-16

- Is Deference the Price of Seeming "Reasonable"? Being Lower Status in High Status Professions and Workplaces .....Cecilia Ridgeway, Stanford University

Come and see a Star!

We are delighted to kick-off the 87th Annual Meeting of the Pacific Sociological Association on Wednesday evening, March 30, 2016, with “The Sociology Stars Speaker Series” (SSSS), sponsored by the PSA Membership Committee. The purpose of this annual event is to give all conference participants the opportunity to see some of our biggest sociology stars in action and learn about the work they are doing.

We are so pleased and proud that our “Star” speaker this year will be Dr. Cecilia L. Ridgeway. Cecilia is currently the Lucie Stern Professor in the Social Sciences at Stanford University. She is a past president of both the PSA (1998-1999) and the American Sociological Association (2012-2013). She is renowned for her insights on how interpersonal processes contribute to systems of stratification and inequality. Her critically acclaimed book Framed by Gender: How Gender Inequality Persists in the Modern World is one example of this work.

Throughout her exemplary academic career, Cecilia has given many guest lectures at universities and conferences across the United States and Canada. For her SSSS talk, Cecilia will share some of her current research on interpersonal status hierarchies in a presentation entitled “Is Deference the Price of Seeming “Reasonable”? Being Lower Status in High Status Professions and Workplaces.”

<td>Many of our theoretical assertions regarding social movements derive from analyses of social movement organizations. Contemporary youth movements today, however, are resistant to classical models that include leaders, officers, and other organizational characteristics. More than ever before, these movements rely heavily on internet resources including twitter and other modes of online communication that serve to mobilize these movements. This panel will discuss the ways in which our theoretical understandings of the mechanisms that drive social movement formation, sustenance, identity and mobilization accurately account for contemporary youth social movements today.</td>

Session 113
Uptown

Session 114
OCC 208
Thursday • 3:30 PM–5:00 PM

Organizer and Presider: Robert Nash Parker, University of California, Riverside
Panelist: Robin Room, Centre for Alcohol Policy Research, La Trobe University, Melbourne, Australia; Centre for Social Research

Comments: Bob Saltz, Prevention Research Center, PIRE; Thomas Greenfield, Alcohol Research Group; Won Kim Cook, Alcohol Research Group

In the 1950s, when the level of alcohol consumption in France was at its highest, a French demographer, Sully Ledermann, developed a description of the distribution of amount of drinking in a population as a "lognormal curve". Since the model proposed that the proportion of heavy drinkers in a population was closely related to the population's overall consumption, it was an unwelcome theory to those with a market interest in alcohol and more generally in an era dominated by the alcoholism model, which defined alcohol problems in terms of "alcoholics", afflicted with a mysterious "X factor", and thus as a distinct population separate from "normal drinkers". As elaborated by the Norwegian sociologist Ole-Jørgen Skog, the "total consumption model" (TCM) became the heart of a "new public health" approach to alcohol policymaking, and in some places (e.g., Sweden) an official orthodoxy. Applied also to other habitual social behaviours such as drugs and gambling, the model has proved fairly robust, but is subject to periodic attacks, often supported by market interests. The presentation considers the cultural politics of the TCM (including its attractions for sociologists seeking to minimize labelling of deviance), and its limited effects in a neoliberal era in restraining deregulation of markets for habitual and potentially harmful commodities. Discrepancies which have emerged between descriptive findings and the model are also considered, pointing the way toward new elaborations of the model and its limits as a policy tool.

Sexualities: Thematic Session: Queering Sociological Studies of Race, Class, and Gender
Panel with Presenters

Organizer and Presider: Ellen Scott, University of Oregon

Panelists: Miriam Abelson, Portland State University; Andrea Clay, San Francisco State University; CJ Pascoe, University of Oregon; Veronica Terriquez, University of Southern California

Whether it’s how we conceptualize and measure the categories we use to study inequalities, the experiences of social identities and how those experiences nuance and challenge dominant ideological assumptions about categories and groups, or the social movements challenged and/or organized by queer and undocumented youth, sociological studies of race, class and gender are engaged in critical theoretical and empirical questions bound to shake the field as a whole. This panel will reflect a bit on the implications of recent empirical work for this larger project of queering sociological studies of race, gender, class, and age.

Applied, Clinical, and Public Sociology: Presidential Plenary: Sociology as a Vocation, Michael Burawoy
[Panel with Presenters]

Organizer and Presider: Robert Nash Parker, University of California, Riverside

Sociology as a Vocation .....Michael Burawoy, University of California, Berkeley
Comments:
Jonathan Turner, University of California, Riverside; Black Hawk Hancock, DePaul University; Catherine Bolzendahl, University of California, Irvine

How should we understand sociology as a vocation today? What does it mean to live for sociology as opposed to live off sociology? This talk embarks from Weber’s notion of vocation, and his application of the idea to science and politics. Weber’s vision of sociology as a vocation, though never spelled out, reflects a moment of departure for the discipline. After World War Two came its moment of arrival, a messianic sociology both in its liberal and radical versions. We can take Edward Shils’ ‘The Calling of Sociology and C Wright Mills, The Sociological Imagination to be the expressions of this moment. The main part of the paper will be devoted to sociology today - a dual moment of engagement and retreat - and the dilemmas it faces as the university is buffeted by the inter-connected processes of commodification and rationalization of knowledge production and dissemination. How can sociology be a vocation in the light of these instrumentalizing pressures?

Fleischer, PhD, CSP, President, Organizational Dynamics Consulting and Chair, CAPACS; Jerrald D. Krause, Ph.D., Consulting Partner, Shamana Consulting, Inc., Community Development and Program Evaluation

This panel is a thematic session corresponding to the Pacific Sociological Association 2016 meeting theme: “Linking Theory and Practice: The Conduct of Sociology.” It includes four panelists, all of whom practice applied sociology in various segments of the private sector: marketing research, consulting, small business entrepreneurship, and community development and program evaluation. Panelists will discuss how sociologists are applying their knowledge outside of academia, and whether one can maintain a critical sociological perspective while also contributing to the for-profit world. The session will begin with each panelist spending about 10 minutes speaking about his or her experiences (based on a list of questions sent prior to the meeting), followed by an open discussion with the audience.

The Language of Performance: Differences in How Men and Women are Described in Evaluations .....JoAnne Wehner, Stanford University

Women's Leadership Training: From Awareness into Action.....Marianne Cooper, Stanford University
Over the past few decades, scholars have documented a variety of ways that stereotypes about gender reproduce inequality in the workplace, negatively affecting the entry and retention of women into male–typed fields and their advancement into leadership roles. As scholars, we understand far less about how to produce organizational change to overcome these negative effects. At the same time, companies have increasingly invested in programs to reduce the biases that women face at work and to empower women to successfully navigate their careers, but these efforts frequently fail to produce their intended effects. What is needed is research that unites academic research and workplace practices. The Clayman Institute for Gender Research at Stanford University has launched several research projects in organizational settings. In this session, we present findings from these projects where we examine how stereotypic biases become embedded in processes where individual performance and potential are evaluated, such as recruiting, hiring, and promotion. We also present results from a research study into the effectiveness of cohort–based learning for creating change agents who act on behalf of themselves and others to produce positive change in organizations.

Thank you to PSA Officers, Committee Members, and the Sociological Perspectives editorial team for keeping PSA going.
Thank you for attending PSA 2016
OUR PH.D. PROGRAM is a vibrant intellectual community of 20-plus faculty members and 45-plus graduate students. We admit graduate students with either B.A. or M.A. degrees.

We subscribe to an apprenticeship philosophy of graduate education in which faculty and students treat education as a joint enterprise. The department is noted for the intense exchange of ideas among its graduate students, a strong culture of student mentoring and support, and faculty-student collaboration.

Note: Two annual meetings were held in 1934, one in January and the other in December. Meetings were not held during WWII; however, the Presidential Addresses were written and published in the Annual Proceedings. The PSA membership voted in 1944 to move the Annual Meeting from December to spring; consequently, there was no meeting held in 1945. The officers from 1945 were carried over to 1946. There was no Presidential Address given in this year. In 1953, in lieu of its regular meeting, the PSA co-sponsored the annual meeting of the American Sociological Society in Berkeley, which was the first time the ASA met in the Pacific region.
Map—Oakland Marriott City Center and Oakland Convention Center

All presentation sessions are scheduled in rooms on the 2nd floor (see map below). For receptions scheduled in Skyline, take the hotel elevators to the top floor. The Uptown room (some committee meetings and SWS breakfast) is on the 2nd floor near the hotel elevators. The California and Oakland rooms (other committee meetings, Chairs and Editors Lunch, ASA Chairs Breakfast, CSA Board Meeting, CSU Chairs Meeting, 2017 Program Committee Lunch) are on the 3rd floor—take the hotel elevators.
See you next year for
