Urban Ecologies
The Flora and Fauna of Fictional Taipei
Møller-Olsen, Astrid

2018

Document Version:
Peer reviewed version (aka post-print)

Link to publication

Citation for published version (APA):

General rights
Copyright and moral rights for the publications made accessible in the public portal are retained by the authors and/or other copyright owners and it is a condition of accessing publications that users recognise and abide by the legal requirements associated with these rights.

• Users may download and print one copy of any publication from the public portal for the purpose of private study or research.
• You may not further distribute the material or use it for any profit-making activity or commercial gain
• You may freely distribute the URL identifying the publication in the public portal

Take down policy
If you believe that this document breaches copyright please contact us providing details, and we will remove access to the work immediately and investigate your claim.
Urban Ecologies: The Flora and Fauna of Fictional Taipei

“Now more than ever, nature cannot be separated from culture”

Félix Guattari

Just as urban gardens have become shelters for bees, birds and other wildlife threatened by industrialized farming and the disappearance of habitats,¹ so does Taiwanese urban fiction harbour an unexpected richness of flora and fauna significant not only for the future of environmental protection, but for the local identity and place-based imagination of its citizens as well.

Through a comparison of the Taipei-focused works Chu Tien-hsin and Wu Mingyi,² this paper argues that the fictional city is a highly relevant biotope when it comes to exploring what Félix Guattari refers to as the “interchangeable lenses or points of view of the three ecologies [mental, social and environmental].”³

Astrid Møller-Olsen is a doctoral candidate at the Centre for Languages and Literature, Lund University, Sweden. She has published on literary drinking cultures, allegorical cannibalism, fictional dictionaries and Daoist commensality in Chinese fiction. Current research focuses ² 《古都》 (Old Capital) and 《獵人們》 (The Hunters) by Chu Tien-hsin 朱天心; 《金魚》 (The Goldfish) and 《鳥》 (Birds) by Wu Mingyi 吳明益.