Where is the love? Show me the love! - Design Workshop and panel discussion on Game Love Culture & Aesthetics

Enevold, Jessica; Brown, Ashley; Flynn-Jones, Emily; Lamerics, Nicolle; MacCallum-Stewart, Esther; Sturrock, Ian

Published in:
[Publication information missing]

2012

Link to publication

Citation for published version (APA):

General rights
Copyright and moral rights for the publications made accessible in the public portal are retained by the authors and/or other copyright owners and it is a condition of accessing publications that users recognise and abide by the legal requirements associated with these rights.

- Users may download and print one copy of any publication from the public portal for the purpose of private study or research.
- You may not further distribute the material or use it for any profit-making activity or commercial gain.
- You may freely distribute the URL identifying the publication in the public portal.

Take down policy
If you believe that this document breaches copyright please contact us providing details, and we will remove access to the work immediately and investigate your claim.
What is Game Love? Where is it? Design Workshop and panel discussion on Game Love Culture & Aesthetics

ABSTRACT

In 2004, Koster, Spector and Right battled it out at the Game Developer’s Conference in San Francisco: who could create the best love story? In 2012, a similar challenge is brought to Under the Mask (UTM) in Luton, UK. Who puts together the best love game? Building on our work with the anthology The Game Love Reader: Playing with Affection, we wish to pose the question that has been puzzling us to all game-interested conference goers at UTM: What is game love? Where does it reside? What makes a game romantic, what makes you love it? How do you build love into a game? How does the game make you a lover? Spector eventually gave up, will you?

Jessica Enevold and Esther MacCallum Stewart, editors of the anthology, will introduce the topic and act as chairs. Setting the stage for designing a love game, with the aid of cards, chocolate, and a playful and passionate audience, and three of our anthology contributors, we want to arrive at some game love definitions. Half of the session will be dedicated to putting together a number of love games. Ashley Brown will act as Game Master, assisted by Emily Flynn-Jones and Nicolle Lamerichs. They will raise questions particular to player-centric love, social dynamics and fan communities to spark the ensuing interactive discussion of the outcomes and shortcomings of our game, which makes up the other half of the session. We hope to harvest insights from a hopefully fun design exercise and to inspire an academically anchored discussion of the issues it has raised to help us in our endeavors to tackle the intriguing topic of game love.

Available at: http://underthemask.wikidot.com/abstracts2012)