Like a Garden of Flowers
A Study of the Formation of the 'Book' of Psalms
Willgren, David

2016

Link to publication

Citation for published version (APA):

General rights
Unless other specific re-use rights are stated the following general rights apply:
Copyright and moral rights for the publications made accessible in the public portal are retained by the authors and/or other copyright owners and it is a condition of accessing publications that users recognise and abide by the legal requirements associated with these rights.
• Users may download and print one copy of any publication from the public portal for the purpose of private study or research.
• You may not further distribute the material or use it for any profit-making activity or commercial gain
• You may freely distribute the URL identifying the publication in the public portal

Read more about Creative commons licenses: https://creativecommons.org/licenses/

Take down policy
If you believe that this document breaches copyright please contact us providing details, and we will remove access to the work immediately and investigate your claim.
Like a Garden of Flowers
A Study of the Formation of the ‘Book’ of Psalms

DAVID WILLGREN | LUND UNIVERSITY

Like a Garden of Flowers
This is a study of the formation of the ‘Book’ of Psalms that attempts to provide answers to two fundamental questions: “how?” and “why?”. The first relates to the diachronic growth of the collection (how are these processes to be reconstructed, and on what grounds?), while the second relates to questions of purpose (to what end are psalms being juxtaposed in a collection?). By conceptualizing the ‘Book’ of Psalms as an anthology, and by inquiring into its poetics by means of paratextuality, David Willgren provides a fresh reconstruction of the formation of the ‘Book’ of Psalms and concludes, in contrast to the canonical approach, that the ‘Book’ of Psalms does not primarily provide a literary context for individual psalms. Rather, it preserves a dynamic selection of psalms that is best seen not as a book of psalms, but as a canon of psalms.

David Willgren is working within the field of Old Testament Exegesis at the Centre for Theology and Religious Studies, Lund University. This is his doctoral thesis.
DAVID WILLGREN

LIKE A GARDEN OF FLOWERS

A STUDY OF THE FORMATION OF THE ‘BOOK’ OF PSALMS

LUND UNIVERSITY
2016
Doctoral Thesis

Like a Garden of Flowers: A Study of the Formation of the ‘Book’ of Psalms

Copyright © 2016 David Willgren

Centre for Theology and Religious Studies
The Joint Faculties of Humanities and Theology
Lund University
Box 192
221 00 Lund

ISBN: 978-91-87833-83-0

Cover: David Willgren
Back cover image: 4Q86 / 4QPs<sup>d</sup> used with permission from Israel Antiquities Authority
Language control: Sarah Hussell, proof-ed.com
Printed by INEKO, Göteborg 2016
When my heart broke in two
I taught both parts to sing
#canonfodder
The last five years have been quite a journey. When I started this project, I had every intention to work within the field of Psalterexegese, acknowledging the Sitz in der Literatur of individual psalms and focusing on psalms standing in structurally significant places throughout the ‘Book’ of Psalms. In short, I was following closely in the academic footsteps of Gerald H. Wilson. However, the longer I studied this fascinating collection and the deeper I went into the ancient artifacts, the more I started to realize that something was missing. I set out searching for an appropriate way to frame these issues, and the quest started to lead me away from my original presuppositions. Indeed, after a while, I even began to question them, and an early form of a more thoroughgoing critique had seen the light of day. I became convinced that a study of the formation of the ‘Book’ of Psalms could never focus only on the collection itself, but had to consider various aspects of its transmission and use, always properly situated in the diverse and complex, yet fascinating scribal and material milieus in which it took shape. To be sure, I am not the first to have reached such conclusions, but in my case, it lead me to a set of texts that had not previously been brought into the discussion, and to a theoretical framework that had been often overlooked.

As for where I ended up, I will not reveal in this preface, but hopefully this study will shed some new light on the exciting and complex issue of the formation of the ‘Book’ of Psalms.

Needless to say, I have not traveled alone, and my sincere gratitude goes first and foremost to my supervisor, Professor Fredrik Lindström at Lund University. Your constant support and many thought-provoking comments have made this study much better than it could ever have been without them. This goes also for my assistant supervisor, Professor Göran Eidevall at Uppsala University. I have much appreciated both of your abilities to combine words of encouragement with academically sharp and constructive criticisms, and our interaction over the past years has not only improved the text in innumerable ways, but also helped me along the way towards being a biblical scholar.

I also wish to thank the Old Testament seminars at Lund and Uppsala for providing many opportunities to discuss various parts of this study. I have benefited greatly from intense and detailed interaction with you all. As for the seminar in Lund, I would like to thank my fellow PhD students Lars Berndes, Linnéa Kullenberg, and Elisabet Nord, as well as Drs. Blaženka Scheuer and Ola Wikander, and Professors Emeriti Erik Aurelius, Bo Johnson, and, not least, Trygve N. D. Mettinger who has been incredibly kind and generous in support of my work. At Uppsala, I would like to mention PhD students Natalie Lantz, Richard Pleijel, and Karin Tillberg, as well as Drs. Ulf Bergström and Mikael Larsson. Thank you for valuable feedback and friendship.

I started my exegetical journey at Örebro School of Theology, and it is with great gratitude that I look back not only to the early formative years, but also to the continuing support I have received. Besides the generous opportunity to have a study place at the library for two years (thank you, Pekka Mellergård) I would like to thank the seminar of biblical exegesis, not least PhD student Stefan Green, Dr. Lennart Boström, Associate Professor Mikael Tellbe, and Professors Greger Andersson and Tommy Wasserman. It has been a great privilege to have had the possibility to discuss texts with you experts from a wide range of biblical scholarship, both Hebrew Bible and the New Testament. In this context I also want to mention my New Testament colleagues at Lund University, especially my office roommates Jan Nylund, David Svård, and Martin Wessbrandt. A thank you also goes to Lars Petersson at David Media, who has provided me with an office in Umeå for the last two years.

As a PhD student in Old Testament exegesis I have had a need to interact more broadly with scholars outside of Sweden, and thanks to the formidable OTSEM network (Old Testament Studies: Epistemologies and Methods), a network consisting of scholars from Northern Europe, Germany, and Great Britain, I have had many opportunities to try my wings in the presence of great minds. A special thanks goes to those who have taken their precious time to provide detailed and engaging responses to my papers, Dr. Urmas Nõmmik, Dr. Habil. Anja Klein, and Professors Gunnlaugur A. Jónsson and Corinna Körtling. Your constructive criticisms have had great impact on the way I have structured and formulated my arguments. I would also like to extend a thank you to Professor Hermann Spieckermann, who has not only attended several of my presentations at OTSEM, always with insightful comments, but also invited me to spend a week in Göttingen in 2015 where I had the opportunity to give a lecture on the formation of the ‘Book’ of Psalms. Apart from being a most generous host, I am grateful for the encouragement to take steps towards publication, and I am proud to say that this study is forthcoming in the FAT II series. I am also deeply indebted to Professor Terje Stordalen, with whom I have had many stimulating discussions, not least during my visit to Oslo in 2014, a visit which was very well timed in my writing process.
A last group of scholars that I would like to thank are the ones I have shamelessly bothered with some of my texts via e-mail. They have all responded graciously and kindly to my blunt inquiries, and helpfully pointed me in the right direction. Thank you, Drs. Trine Bjørnung Hasselbalch, Alexandra Kleinerman, and Anders Mortensen, Associate Professor Angela Kim Harkins, and Professors James P. Allen, Jean-Marie Auwers, Walter Brueggemann, Jenny Strauss Clay, Susan E. Gillingham, Jean-Jacques Glassner, José B. Torres Guerra, J. Clinton McCann Jr., Norbert Lohfink, Richard B. Parkinson, Eileen M. Schuller, and William Yarchin for stimulating feedback. I am also grateful for the important input provided by Professor LarsOlov Eriksson, who served as opponent at my final seminar.

Last, but certainly not least, I would like to thank my friends and family for continuous support and encouragement. You all know who you are, but thanks go especially to my wife, Fatima, and our two boys, Samuel and Elias. I could not have done this without you.

Ultimately, I hope that this study will contribute not only to academic discussions, but also, in the long run, to the body of Christ. It is only together with all the saints that we have the possibility to comprehend what is the breadth and length and height and depth, and to know the love of Christ that surpasses knowledge, so that we may be filled with all the fullness of God. If my work has succeeded to shed some light on areas previously dim, it is only by the grace of God. In Christ I take refuge. Lord, let me never be put to shame.

Umeå, 2016–04–01

David Willgren
Part I - Framing the Task at Hand

1 The Problem .................................................................1
   1.1 Wilson's New Framework ...........................................5
   1.2 Sketching Major Trajectories.................................10
   1.3 Focal Points for the Current Study.........................17
2 The Elusive String .........................................................21
   2.1 Anthology Defined ..................................................22
   2.2 An Anthological Genre? .............................................26
   2.3 Anthologies Unfold ..................................................28
   2.4 Uncovering the Artificial .........................................30
   2.5 Outlining the Task at Hand .......................................33

Part II - Anthologies Compared

Introduction ......................................................................37
3 Artifactual Diversity ....................................................39
   3.1 Reconsidering Fixed Sequences ..............................39
   3.2 Variation in Ancient Manuscripts .........................42
   3.3 Continuous Variation ...............................................48
4 Paratexts .......................................................................51
   4.1 Prefaces .................................................................51
   4.2 Titles .......................................................................55
   4.3 Colophons, Doxologies, and Epilogues .....................57
5 The How and the Why .....................................................61
   5.1 Collections with Few Manuscript Variations ..........61
   5.2 Collections with Manuscript Variation ..................63
   5.3 Collections without Ancient Manuscripts ...............65
   5.4 The Question of Purpose Once Again .....................73
Overview and Outlook ....................................................79
Part III - The Artifacts

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Introduction</td>
<td>6 Overview of the Scrolls</td>
<td>83</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>6.1 Second Century BCE</td>
<td>85</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>6.2 First Century BCE</td>
<td>87</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>6.3 The Turn of the Era</td>
<td>92</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>6.4 First Century CE</td>
<td>93</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7 Evaluating the Evidence</td>
<td>103</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>7.1 Reconstructing a ‘Book’ of Psalms?</td>
<td>109</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>7.2 11Q5 as a Competing Collection?</td>
<td>121</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Overview and Outlook</td>
<td></td>
<td>131</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Part IV - In Search of the Artificial

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Introduction</td>
<td>8 Psalms 1–2 as Preface</td>
<td>135</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>8.1 The Psalms in Question</td>
<td>137</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>8.2 Combining Psalms 1–2</td>
<td>138</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>8.3 Evaluating the Evidence</td>
<td>155</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9 Superscriptions</td>
<td>168</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>9.1 Overview and Analysis</td>
<td>175</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>9.2 Conclusions</td>
<td>176</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10 Psalm 72:20</td>
<td>194</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>10.1 Attempted Solutions</td>
<td>199</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>10.2 Psalm 72:20 as a Frozen Colophon</td>
<td>200</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>11 ‘Book’ Dividers</td>
<td>205</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>11.1 Preliminary Observations</td>
<td>205</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>11.2 Integral Parts or Later Insertions?</td>
<td>208</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>11.3 A Possible Clue in 1 Chronicles 16</td>
<td>214</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>11.4 Reconstructing Contexts of Use for Amen</td>
<td>219</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>11.5 One Doxology Short?</td>
<td>229</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>11.6 Conclusions</td>
<td>245</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12 The ‘Final Hallel’</td>
<td>247</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>12.1 The Psalms in Question</td>
<td>248</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>12.2 Psalms 145.146–150 as a Collection</td>
<td>278</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>12.3 The Hallelujah Frameworks Once Again</td>
<td>282</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>12.4 Conclusions</td>
<td>285</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Overview and Outlook</td>
<td></td>
<td>287</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Part V - Psalms on Repeat
Introduction ........................................................................................................ 293
13 Traces in the Hebrew Bible ........................................................................... 297
  13.1 Declared Citations .................................................................................. 297
  13.2 Undeclared Citations .............................................................................. 300
  13.3 Stock-Phrases ....................................................................................... 309
  13.4 External Indications ............................................................................... 317
  13.5 Conclusions ............................................................................................ 318
14 Traces in the Dead Sea Scrolls ................................................................. 321
  14.1 Declared Citations .................................................................................. 322
  14.2 Undeclared Citations .............................................................................. 331
  14.3 Psalms in ‘New’ Collections ................................................................... 346
  14.4 External Indications ............................................................................... 349
  14.5 Conclusions ............................................................................................ 352
15 Prolonging Trajectories of Use ................................................................. 355
  15.1 Prophetic and Davidic ............................................................................ 356
  15.2 Continuous Davidization ....................................................................... 360
  15.3 Traces of (Scriptural) Collections of Psalms ......................................... 364
  15.4 Conclusions ............................................................................................ 371
Overview and Outlook ...................................................................................... 373

Part VI - The Formation of the ‘Book’ of Psalms
Introduction ........................................................................................................ 377
16 How? ............................................................................................................ 379
  16.1 Gathering the Evidence .......................................................................... 379
  16.2 Putting the Pieces Together ................................................................... 384
17 Why? .............................................................................................................. 393
  17.1 Purpose(s) of Selection .......................................................................... 393
  17.2 Purpose of Organization ........................................................................ 395
  17.3 Conclusions ............................................................................................ 400
A Final Outlook .................................................................................................. 401

Appendix 1: Catalogues of Incipits .................................................................. 405
Appendix 2: Superscriptions ............................................................................ 415
Appendix 3: LXX Manuscripts ........................................................................ 423

Sources .............................................................................................................. 425
Like a Garden of Flowers

This is a study of the formation of the ‘Book’ of Psalms that attempts to provide answers to two fundamental questions: “how?” and “why?”. The first relates to the diachronic growth of the collection (how are these processes to be reconstructed, and on what grounds?), while the second relates to questions of purpose (to what end are psalms being juxtaposed in a collection?).

By conceptualizing the ‘Book’ of Psalms as an anthology, and by inquiring into its poetics by means of paratextuality, David Willgren provides a fresh reconstruction of the formation of the ‘Book’ of Psalms and concludes, in contrast to the canonical approach, that the ‘Book’ of Psalms does not primarily provide a literary context for individual psalms. Rather, it preserves a dynamic selection of psalms that is best seen not as a book of psalms, but as a canon of psalms.

David Willgren is working within the field of Old Testament Exegesis at the Centre for Theology and Religious Studies, Lund University. This is his doctoral thesis.